Tega Cay Golf Club Bring Little League Concept to Golf
PGA Junior League Golf offers team setting for juniors to learn and enjoy to the game golf

Tega Cay, SC March 28, 2013—Tega Cay Golf Club is offering a team sports approach to golf in Tega Cay, SC May - July through PGA Junior League Golf. PGA Junior League Golf brings juniors into the game in an exciting new way, fostering a sense of sportsmanship and teamwork typically associated with other recreational team sports. Teams consist of youngster's ages 8 to 13, with no previous playing experience required.

Much like other recreational league sports, PGA Junior League Golf participants receive team uniforms with jersey numbers. Rosters are co-ed with competitions being two-person scrambles, which reinforces the team concept and limits the pressure on any one player. Coaches can substitute players every three holes so all of the 10 to 12 golfers on each team can participate.

Teams play regular season matches throughout the first part of the season before convening for city, sectional and regional championships. Each regional champion, along with the host region team, advance to a national championship held in the fall.

“We are excited to create a PGA Junior League Golf team for our local juniors,” said Cami Berher, PGA, of Tega Cay Golf Club. “It allows us to introduce the game of golf to young boys and girls in a fun, low-pressure, team-oriented setting and enhances the experience of competitive golf with junior golfers.”

The PGA of America and LEJ Sports partnered to bring PGA Junior League Golf to select facilities across the country in 2012. More than 1,800 young golfers competed on more than 120 teams in 22 markets throughout June and July. Modeled after Little League Baseball, PGA Junior League Golf introduces children to the game of golf in a team setting under the direction of PGA/LPGA Professionals. Parents also play an active role, making the program a family activity to create another generation of players to enjoy the game.
