New Junior Golf Program at Tega Cay Golf Club
Project Impact Golf Programs & Summer Camps
featuring the PGA Sports Academy
Provides renewed approach to golf

Tega Cay, SC February 4, 2013— Tega Cay Golf Club is offering an exciting new junior program designed to expose golf to juniors of all ability levels. The Project Impact program, featuring the PGA Sports Academy curriculum, will help youth learn to play golf and have fun in the process. The series will be offered by PGA/LPGA Professionals in a group environment, from March 1, 2013 with affordable clinic & camp pricing.

“Thanks to the PGA Sports Academy, our program will teach juniors golf skills using physical movement, games, and fun,” said Cami Berher. “Active play is the way young children learn, and the PGA Sports Academy links fundamental golf motion into play creating lifelong golfers! It’s just plain FUN and kids love it!”

The lesson & clinic programs are offered year-round for young children (3 years +) through competitive-level teens. Camps will commence this summer beginning June 11, 2013. Each session will provide golf and near golf experiences, fitness and nutrition knowledge, and plenty of opportunity for on-and-off course athletics. Golf skills will be the basis for learning, along with sportsmanship and open play.

The program is designed to teach juniors long-term athletic development to produce lifelong golfers and will serve south Charlotte and upstate South Carolina.
